

CHAPTER V

ETHICAL CONSIDERATION

Although case - control investigations do not involve administering or withholding therapies , they do obtain personal information. The investigators obtained an individual's consent before entering him into the study and individual understood the general nature and propose of the study. All data collected from each individual were held in confidence.